Report on this Seminar

On the 29th of September 2023, a seminar was conducted on the topic "Status of Women in Ancient India" with the aim of exploring the various dimensions and cross-cutting issues related to women's roles and conditions in ancient Indian society. The seminar was presented by Deb Krishna Saha and attended by 25 students.

The seminar was designed to provide an in-depth analysis of the status of women in ancient India, highlighting the diverse and often contradictory nature of their roles across different historical periods. Deb Krishna Saha, the speaker, brought forward a comprehensive examination of the subject, focusing on several key aspects:

The seminar began with an overview of the socio-political and cultural context of ancient India. This included discussions on the Vedic period, the Mauryan Empire, and the Gupta period, all of which contributed to shaping the status and roles of women.

Saha delved into ancient legal texts such as the Manu smriti and Dharma shastras, examining how they prescribed the roles and rights of women. The seminar covered various aspects, including property rights, marriage, and education.

The speaker discussed the roles women played in different spheres of life—domestic, economic, and religious. Notable figures such as Gargi and Maitreyi, who were scholars and philosophers, were highlighted to illustrate the presence of influential women in ancient texts.

A significant portion of the seminar addressed the contradictions and variations in the status of women across different regions and time periods. This included discussions on how the status of women could differ significantly between different kingdoms and under different rulers.

The portrayal of women in ancient Indian art, literature, and mythology was also explored. The seminar highlighted how these representations reflected and influenced societal attitudes towards women.

The seminar concluded with a reflective discussion on how understanding the historical status of women in ancient India can inform modern perspectives on gender and social justice. Deb Krishna Saha emphasized the importance of recognizing both the advancements and limitations present in ancient practices and how they have shaped the current status of women in Indian society.

The seminar provided valuable insights and fostered a deeper understanding of the complex issues surrounding the status of women in ancient India, encouraging participants to think critically about historical narratives and their implications for present-day issues.

REPORT:

An invited lecture was arranged by the Department of English of Turku Hansda Lapsa Hemram Mahavidyalay on 27th March 2024 as its first lecture in the second series of Debayan Deb Barman Commemorative Lectures in the academic session of 2023- 2024 with the objective of acquainting the students with the topic of 'Romanticism in English Poetry'. It was expected that the participants will be able to expand their horizon of knowledge on this particular area with this special lecture.

A total of 23 students of the NEP curriculum from the English Department participated in the Course. The invited speaker delivered an interesting lecture on the subject of romanticism to highlight the major tenets of the movement as had developed during the Late eighteenth and early nineteenth century England. He began by defining the term and its various implications by suggesting names of important authors and their books. All the important Romantic poets were also referred to in this lecture by the honourable speaker. Important themes like Nature, Imagination, Creativity, Emotions etc were referred with special reference to Romanticism. The students were excited with this new vista of knowledge that they could gather from this lecture.

The outcome of this lecture was that the students got acquainted with a number of authors and books on the topic which could provide them a better scope of research in higher studies if pursued. The speaker's engaging manner of speaking also created an interactive session during the lecture and gave them a chance to know about a variety of texts written by the writers of Romantic period in English Literature.
