Sub: Seeking permission for arranging a series of online invited Lectures during the Pandemic session of 2020- 2021

Sir,

This is extremely unfortunate that the entire world is undergoing through an unprecedented emergency situation due to the sudden outbreak of the Pandemic at present. The educational institutions are also facing a huge alteration in their manner of keeping up with the newly implemented blended mode of online education. Technology has become the necessity for the idea of practicing work from home everywhere. In spite of that, the prolonged nature of the existing situation is manifesting a lack of interest among the young learners who being restricted within their territories are losing their usual spark or enthusiasm.

In view of the above circumstances, on behalf of the Department of English I would like to seek your permission to arrange a series of invited lectures by eminent resource persons over the online platform of Google Meet in collaboration with the IQAC in the next few months of this academic session to add some variety in the curriculum of this educational institution. The Lectures will be administered by the Faculty members of the English Department of THLH Mahavidyalay along with a technical aid of our acquaintance. The necessary information will be circulated within due time at your Office.

We are looking forward towards your kind cooperation.

REPORT:

The session was a single talk event which commenced with a formal introduction of the speaker who is a retired Professor of the English Department of Visva Bharati, a Central University. Prof. Goutam Ghosal was able to ignite a rejuvenating interest in Romantic Poetry through his wonderful deliberation on Romantic Literature from an entirely new perspective which tried to situate the Romantic Poets in the broader scenario of the history of English Literature by claiming that Romantic Poets were actually trying to bring a different kind of Enlightenment through their poetry. Being an enthusiast in the philosophical beliefs of Sri Aurobindo, Prof. Ghosal insisted on the concept of the inner conscious being which could be reflected in poems by Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron and Shelley. Prof. Ghosal emphasized on the different aspects of Enlightenment which can only happen with the broadening of the human conscience through experience and understanding of the subtle forces embedded in Nature and then proceeded on with his elaboration of the topic with reference to works of particular Romantic Poets.

The lecture was very well received by a number of 82 participants as they could gather a different kind of knowledge about the Romantic poems which were not a part of the curriculum. They were able to relate with the speaker's lucid way of delivering the issue as he had referred to some of the very interesting and popular poems by particular Romantic poets in order to keep the students interested throughout the Lecture. The session ended with a vote of thanks from one of the teachers of the Department and the students were informed about the tentative schedule of the next day's Lecture.

REPORT:

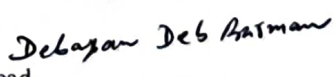

The online invited lecture began with a formal introduction from the Head of the Department. The speaker Dr. Samipendra Banerjee reaching us all the way from Gour Banga University over the Virtual Platform began his speech by talking about the dramatist of the play and the major concerns of the play as well. The thematic aspects of Bravely Fought the Queen were discussed in quite some detail by the speaker. He highlighted the issues like the allegorical significance of the title, the issues of woman empowerment and the important characters of the play. The significance of the play in the context of Indian English writing was also dealt by the speaker.

The online platform was very well handled by Ashutosh Sarkar as it would have been difficult to manage without him. Our department extended sincere thanks to the speaker, the Principal, the IQAC Coordinator, the technological assistant and the participants in the online lecture. The students have this text in their curriculum due to which it was easy for them to relate about most of the topics discussed by the speaker in his lecture. The speaker's conversational and interactive mode reduced the complexity of the play and made it an excellent session altogether. The speaker was also very happy with the response of the listeners in the program.

REPORT:

This was the third invited Lecture in the Online Lecture series which has been continuing over the virtual platform owing to the inability of organizing them in the College Campus due to closure of institutions for the worldwide Pandemic. Prof. Sarani Ghosal Mondal is a veteran in the field of Romantic Poetry constructed by lesser known Poets of the Romantic Age. More than 50 participants had joined this lecture. The students and the teachers were deeply influenced by the poets chosen by her to develop a comparative analysis between them. The speaker talked about a lesser known poet named Felicia Hemans and compared her works with that of other Romantic poets like Shelley and Keats. The speaker talked about poems like 'Dirge', 'Casabianca' and 'The Stately Homes of England'. She compared them with a few poems from Shelley and Keats. The elements of female identity, sensitivity, melancholy, cheerfulness etc as could be found in her poems became the topic of comparison with other poems by Keats and Shelley. It was more of a celebration of the feminine voice in the poems of Hemans for Prof. Mondal, that became the central argument in her lecture.

The participants joined from all over the virtual platform as the lecture was made open to all. It was a remarkable experience for all of us as the speaker's unconventional deliberation on Romantic Poems ushered a lot of questions and observations from the participants.

REPORT:

Being a theatre expert, Prof. Sen's lecture, the fourth Lecture in this series was able to raise the standard of the event through his erudition and poignant deliberation on the topic. He chose to enlighten about the seasonal plays of Tagore like Sharadotsav and Phalguni which were mostly enacted on stage to celebrate the seasonal changes of Nature. The speaker engaged in a conversational session in which he addressed the issue of text and its performance on stage and mentioned how Tagore had made use of seasonal products from Nature for highlighting the stage decorations during the performance of Sharadotsav in Santiniketan. For Phalguni, the stage was also decorated with leaves and flowers to reveal the mood of the play through the decorations on stage. Prof. Sen also pointed out the non-conforming nature of these plays to the European standard of theatre in the Modernist period.

It was indeed a great experience to have such an eminent personality with us and the participants were deeply enriched by this Online lecture arranged by THLH Mahavidyalay and team.

REPORT:

This was an extremely prestigious event as the resource person was an international figure. Prof. Nicholas Birns had happily consented with our request in spite of his very busy schedule. This was the fifth Lecture in the series of Invited Online Lectures organized by the English Department in collaboration with the Internal Quality Assurance Cell of THLH Mahavidyalay. A large number of participants had gathered in the online Platform to attend to this lecture on Christie's Detective Fiction which highlighted the role of the unreliable narrator of the fiction. Prof. Birns created an ambience of learning through his close reading of the text along the lines of realizing the purpose of the unreliable narrator in a detective novel like The Murder of Roger Ackroyd. It focused on the character of Dr Sheppard and his role in the novel. The Principal and the IQAC coordinator were present in this session throughout to inspire the spirit of learning in the virtual mode during the worldwide pandemic.

More than 100 participants attended this lecture and it was a huge success. The program was made widely available over the virtual platform with the help of our technological assistance named Ashutosh Sarkar.

FLYER AND EVENT VIA GMEET

REPORT: This lecture was about the polyvalence of the Vampire 's existence in the broader narrative structure of Bram Stoker's gothic novel of the nineteenth century. Prof. Fitzsimmons tried to show how the novel was actually addressing the concerns of the Victorian age through the representation of an uncanny other in the form of a blood sucking human like character existing within the society with regular people. The multidimensional character of the Dracula was also highlighted in this lecture by the international resource person that we had with us. More than 50 participants had joined in the course.

It was indeed our privilege to have him with us through the virtual mode for our students as well as teachers. The event was a memorable one indeed as the participants were able to get to know the critical aspects of the above mentioned nineteenth century Gothic novel

REPORT: The speaker in this lecture highlighted one of the biggest concerns of contemporary India and the lecture became an interactive session regarding the various challenges faced by the technological discrimination in educational sectors which had started to get used to the virtual mode of teaching and learning during the Pandemic. Prof. Das feared that a sense of alienation would eventually destroy the egalitarianism required for the functioning of any educational institution in India.

It was a highly reflective session as the participants could voice out their concerns regarding the impact of the Pandemic on the educational scenario of India. The lecture ended with a set of questions and observations from the participants. It was indeed a much required session at that moment as the expert was able to focus on the major problems of the Pandemic

REPORT:

The speaker in this session enlightened participants on the very important issue of gender in Chinua Achebe's fiction Things Fall Apart, which being a post-colonial novel carries an extra significance in terms of the Indian culture as well. Dr. Dasthakur delivered one of the best lectures in this series as he was able to explore the plight of man and woman relationship as depicted in the text. The speaker was able to substantiate his arguments by referring to relevant areas from the text. It was a reflective session as the speaker was able to point towards the internal politics of representation of the gender bias inherent within the text in the course of the action of the novel by showing how the gender stereotypes had affected the entire village in which the Ibo Society had a strict system of male predominance to be maintained by the next generations as well. Dr Dasthakur highlighted how many of the practices of the tribal society in the novel created a separate world for their women in all aspects of life whether in home or in the outer world.

REPORT

This was the last invited lecture in the series of online lectures in the academic session of 2020- 2021 organized by the English Department in collaboration with the IQAC of Turku Hansda Lapsa Hemram Mahavidyalay. It was a significant session as the speaker talked about one of the major texts in Semester 1 of the Hons. curriculum prescribed by the University of Burdwan for those pursuing English Literature at their Undergraduate level. Prof. Bandyopadhyay focused on the element of allegory that can be read in the conduct of the characters in the Dice Game of the Mahabharata. He was referring to various dialogues and several other responses of the characters in the episode of the Dice Game in the epic. The students could identify with the speaker and his lecture as they already had a sound knowledge of the incidents taking place in this part of the epic.

The speaker was overwhelmed with the kind of response he received during the session and could not believe that so many young enthusiasts had joined to hear his deliberation on the epic of ancient India. The program ended with a formal vote of thanks to all from the Head of the English Department. A special gratitude was expressed by Mr Ashutosh Sarkar who had been a constant support in organizing this lecture series.

REPORT:

Owing to the emergency enclosures of the educational institutions all over India since March 2020, all the academic institutions have been functioning in the blended mode. Being unable to have much opportunity of meeting with friends or family, the pandemic has forced people to focus upon the importance of the changing dichotomy in gender roles to a great extent. The Gender Cell of THLH Mahavidyalay took this opportunity to organize an awareness program in collaboration with the IQAC to sensitize on the topic 'Gender roles during the Pandemic' on 8th March 2021. It was an intra College program and the invited faculty speaker for the program was Dr. Sewli Chatterjee of the Mathematics department of THLH Mahavidyalay. The program was attended by 29 participants over the Google meet platform.

The objective of the program was to have an interactive session about the kind of roles and responsibilities which had become important to be performed during the pandemic period particularly due to the phenomena of 'work from home' for both men and women.

The speaker being a working woman and a homemaker by herself was able to highlight the significant issues that demanded attention regarding the gender roles at particularly within the home. She focused on the necessity of sharing the workload at home for both working men and women in order to reduce the mental pressure during the lockdown phase.

The online program was an interactive session among the students and teachers and the outcome was indeed a satisfactory one as the young learners were sensitized about the concept of gender discrimination and how to grow up by keeping a progressive outlook at all situations. They were satisfied as certain issues like mental health and well being of people staying at home during the pandemic phase was also referred to by the speaker.

Report of the Programme:-

INTRODUCTION AND HISTORY OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS IN INDIA

Speaker: Dr Suman Mukherjee

Co-ordinator of IQAC, THLH Mahavidyalay

26/04/2021

In commemoration of World IPR Day, the IPR Cell in collaboration with IQAC organized a Online Special Lecture on Intellectual Property Rights on 26/04/2021 at 6.30 p.m. It was conducted through Team Link Platform. The history of intellectual property rights in India can be traced back to the British colonial period when the first copyright and patent laws were introduced in the mid-19th century. However, these laws were primarily designed to serve the interests of British entrepreneurs and did not take into account the needs and aspirations of Indian inventors and creators.

After India gained independence in 1947, the government took several steps to promote indigenous innovation and creativity and protect the Intellectual Property Rights for indian citizens. In 1957, the Indian Patent Act was enacted, which established a system of patent registration and protection that was more accessible and affordable for Indian inventors and entrepreneurs.

In the 1960s and 1970s, the Indian government implemented a series of policies to promote self-reliance and reduce dependence on foreign technology and capital. These policies included the development of indigenous technologies, the creation of public research institutions, and the establishment of a legal framework that allowed for the compulsory licensing of patents in certain cases of national interest.

The Present Scenario of Intellectual Property Rights in India

In the 1980s and 1990s, India began to open up its economy and integrate with the global market, which led to a greater emphasis on the protection of Intellectual Property Rights as a means to attract foreign investment and technology. In 1994, India became a signatory to the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property (TRIPS) under the World Trade Organization (WTO), which required India to bring its intellectual property laws in line with international standards.

Since then, India has revised its intellectual property laws several times to comply with its obligations under TRIPS and other international agreements, while also trying to balance the interests of domestic inventors and consumers with those of foreign corporations. Some of the key reforms include the introduction of product patents for pharmaceuticals in 2005, the amendment of the Copyright Act in 2012, and the adoption of a National IPR Policy in 2016 to promote innovation, entrepreneurship, and access to knowledge.

The history of intellectual property rights in India has been shaped by a complex interplay of historical, economic, and political factors, as well as by the evolving global intellectual property regime. While India has made significant progress in protecting and promoting intellectual property rights over the years, there are still challenges and controversies surrounding issues such as patentability, copyright infringement, and access to essential medicines and technologies.
